$14 million tentative budget OK'd

Albany schools may add new programs

By Reed Malcolm
The Journal

ALBANY — The School Board is considering adding up to nine new programs if the district gets additional funds from the state lottery and Proposition 93. The board last week approved a tentative 1989-90 $14 million budget based on estimated figures. The final plan will be determined after the governor announces the state's budget in early August.

District officials said they are expecting to see some additional funding once Proposition 98 and lottery monies are distributed.

"(Albany School District) has always had a very fluid budget," Board Vice-President Gayle Hasscott said at last week's meeting. "From the April budget revise to the May budget revise, there was as much as a $40,000 to $60,000 variance."

"This year could go as high as $60,000, just as it could turn out to be nothing at all. We should still think about getting programs started."

The proposed programs include:

- an extra period for sixth and seventh grade classes;
- high school and middle school minority achievement programs;
- elementary music and swimming;
- instructional computers;
- elementary counseling;
- high school work experience.

Boardmember Alan Riffer said the district will be unable to spread the variance evenly over all the proposed programs. This would leave each program partially funded and thus incapable of operating, he said.

The board will decide which of the programs will receive the funding.

Mother claims administrators covered up gun incident

By City News

RICHMOND — The stepmother of a mentally retarded boy threatened on his Richmond school bus by a classmate brandishing a loaded handgun in May said last week that school officials tried to cover up the incident.

Cindy Nunn said police were not called and school officials delayed notifying parents of other children on the bus. She said she was not told until 7 p.m. May 23 that 19-year-old Mark Welch, the son of a police chaplain, had threatened to kill her stepson, John, with a .357-caliber Smith & Wesson Magnum that morning as the two boys rode to De Anza High School.

The bus driver, Verna Flanagan, said she persuaded Welch to give her the gun and one of the 12 severely handicapped children on the bus was injured in the incident.

Deputy Superintendent Sylvester Greenwood of the Richmond Unified School District said the school police force did not call police because Welch, 19, is mentally handicapped.

If Welch had been a student in a regular education program, Greenwood said, he would have

The month-old Phoenix School operates out of United Methodist Church on Stockton Avenue

Out of the ashes

Yellow Brick Road parents start their own preschool

By Reed Malcolm
The Journal

EL CERRITO — The parents of former Yellow Brick Road School students have started their own preschool despite charges from the state and city they are operating illegally.

The Phoenix School opened June 5 at the United Methodist Church on Stockton Street. The move followed a bitter policy dispute between Yellow Brick Road owners and parents that culminated with the parents of 58 children, ages 2 to 6, boycotting the school.

The controversy started last May when Yellow Brick Road, a non-profit school operating at Mira Vista Church on Cutting Boulevard, was sold to Dennis and Eleni Wanken of Oakland. Some parents became angry when the Wankens turned the program into a for-profit operation.

Matters grew worse on May 12 when the new owners fired preschool administrator Kathe Latham and replaced her with Yellow Brick Road teacher Mary Beth Palone. Latham is now the administrator at the Phoenix School.

Phoenix parents and staff members, most of whom are former Yellow Brick Road employees, have accused Palone of undermining their original negotiations by conspiring to buy the school behind their backs. Palone's fiancée, Paul Borg, is currently attempting to purchase Yellow Brick Road from the Wankens.

Palone did not return The Journal's calls.

Although the Phoenix has met a July 1 deadline for filing a licensing application with the state Community Care Licensing Agency, thus avoiding a $200-a-day fine, licensing often takes months. Until then the school will be violating state regulations.

According to C.C.L. state supervisor Juan Matta, there will be no need to take immediate action against the school as long as they have already filed for a license and the school poses no safety hazards to its children.

Issuance of the credential usually takes from 30 to 90 days.

The school is also operating without a valid permit and has

Real estate up, race bets down

By Teri DeLoache
The Journal

ALBANY — While experiencing declines in both sales tax and race track revenues recently, City Administrator Steven Salomon said the city remains fiscally sound thanks to a booming real estate market.

"The estimated revenue from the race track is going to hell in a hand basket," City Councilmember Ed McManus warned the council recently, and the newly adopted budget shows that revenues from sales taxes have declined as well.

Salomon and McManus both attribute the decline in race track revenues to the introduction of satellite wagering in 1986. Now bettors don't have to come to Golden Gate Fields to bet on the races. The races are simulcast at many fairgrounds, including Bay Meadows in San Mateo. Less money is being bet at Golden Gate Fields and this cuts into Albany's revenues.

The city received more than $800,000 from the track in 1984-85. Last year, that figure dropped

County changes rules in homeless programs

Bay City News

MARTINEZ — Over the objections of advocates for the homeless, the Contra Costa County Board of Supervisors last week changed the ground rules for county support of shelter programs.

The board unanimously passed a resolution, effective in September, that will eliminate a telephone hotline program which grants vouchers for motel rooms to homeless people who cannot be accommodated at shelters.

Under the resolution shelter operators will not be reimbursed by the county for housing homeless people who are not eligible for county general assistance benefits.

The county now pays the Volunteers of America $12 a night for each person housed at the organization's two 18-bed mobile home shelters in Richmond and does not require proof of eligibility for benefits.

Volunteers of America spokesman Steve Bucknum said under the new rules the Richmond shelter would be forced to turn away homeless people who do not qualify for benefits because the V.O.A. cannot afford to operate the shelters without county reimbursement.

Phil Bertenthal of the Contra Costa Legal Service Foundation said the board's action is an attempt to strengthen its position in a lawsuit his organization brought against the county.

After the national guard armory shelters in Concord and Richmond closed for the summer, the board attempted to restrict the expensive motel voucher program to families and disabled or ill homeless people.

Bertenthal obtained a temporary restraining order forcing the county to maintain a level of service to the homeless equivalent to that outlined in a spring shelter plan approved by the board.

That plan called for the operation of three permanent shelters to replace the armories and motel

Albany, El Cerrito celebrate Fourth of July

The annual flag raising by the 14th District Drill Team was the highlight of Albany's Fourth of July festivities at Memorial Park. After, kids joined in a watermelon feed while their parents wove their way through arts and crafts booths. El Cerrito Community Center (above) saw a big turnout. Participants enjoyed international food from service club booths and local entertainment.

Kudos to Albany council members

Editor:

Albany Councilmembers Nichols and Lewis and Mayor Kruse are to be commended. They did not let their own preference get in the way of democracy.

After listening to the people speak at the June 27 parking meter hearing (where 110 Albany citizens showed up against the meters and 17 for) these three officials voted to place the parking meter issue on the April 1990 ballot even though they personally still wanted the meters.

On the other hand, Councilmembers McManus and Rubin voted against letting the people of Albany vote on this important issue. Unfortunately they seem to have forgotten that one of the things that make America a democracy is a trust in the wisdom of its citizens. In April they can still vote for the meters. I want my chance to vote against them.

Ad Hoc Committee 'turned it around'

Editor:

They said it couldn't be done! But with a little faith and lots of determination and persistence an Ad Hoc Committee of nine people was able to turn around the City Council's decision to implement parking meters this year.

However, our work has just begun for this is merely a reprieve until April of 1990 when the issue will be placed on the ballot in a city election for the citizens to vote on.

At the public hearing on June 27 we presented talks based on weeks of study which supported our stand against parking meters

Last week's parking meter hearing. The council voted to put the issue on the April 1990 ballot and parking lots in Albany. When we started our campaign we were not sure who, if anyone, agreed with us. Tuesday night, at the public hearing, we found out!

The support for our viewpoint was overwhelming. We want to thank all who turned out to the meeting to be counted (by applause and a show of hands), the 40 or so citizens who stood up to speak so eloquently and all those others who helped. Thanks to the citizens who signed our letter requesting a public hearing and a place on the ballot, the merchants who displayed our posters, the neighbors who helped us distribute flyers, Albanyites who wrote letters to The Journal and to the City Council, Examiner columnist and Albany citizen John Dvorak (unknown to us before Tuesday night) who brought to the hearing 100 signatures he had collected from his neighbors against parking meters.

To paraphrase Mayor Kruse, the people have spoken and we must listen to the will of the people.

Japanese students need host families

Editor:

Thirty-four Japanese students will arrive in El Cerrito within the next month. These university students want to learn the American way of life through a home-stay experience.

Finding host families has been especially difficult this summer. Excuses range from "we're too busy" to "we don't have enough room."

These students would love to be part of a busy, vital household. Japanese homes are much smaller than ours. It is easy to fit one more person in — let them share a room with your child. The students attend classes daily and take part in several activities each week.

Volunteer to be a host family and help represent our town to them. Promote international understanding by opening your heart and your home. The rewards are incredible. To find out more call 233-6710.

BART director meets the press

Wilson, a controversial choice, says challenge welcome

Bay City News

OAKLAND — BART's general manager said last week that coming to the transit agency is "a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity" because he'll have the chance to put his signature on extensions and new markets.

At a news conference on his second day on the job, Frank Wilson said, "The real attraction of coming to BART is that it's an organization that's not afraid to change and of being on the forefront of technical and operating issues that are key in the industry."

It's also an organization that's not afraid of arguing and bickering, as Wilson witnessed firsthand when board members exchanged heated words at a meeting of the Engineering and Operations Committee.

Wilson later smiled and said that energetic exchanges are wonderful and better than having a passive board.

The 41-year-old Wilson has to learn to work with the board because he was hired to his $110,000-a-year post on a narrow 5-4 vote at an acrimonious meeting last month. Last week he said that vote is history and he hopes to get along well with the board.

Wilson, who worked for the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority in Philadelphia and the Chicago Transit Authority, said, "Given the areas I've come from, this is a step up."

"I've come from places that were basically relics and built in the area that time forgot but coming here is a breath of fresh air. "If you look at the industry, BART represents a fine example of high tech."

Wilson said he told BART employees in a meeting it was crucial time for the agency because it is going from a system that is maturing to one that will expand. The planned extensions represent a very aggressive future plan and our test now is to execute the plan, he said.

Wilson said in addition to tensions he will focus on problems at BART stations as a major task that will be a very high priority.

"I want to stress a customer service-first attitude here," he said.

To reporters at the news conference, Wilson said, "I pledge to be open and forthright and present you with timely and accurate information."

"This is my second day on the job and already I've had two board meetings, one bomb threat and have been handed a very brief book with about 50 pages of issues and no answers," he said.

He said someone phoned a bomb threat at the Powell Street station in San Francisco but it was checked out and nothing was found.

Richmond City Council

New law protects AIDS victims

Bay City News

RICHMOND — The City Council last week unanimously approved an ordinance protecting people with AIDS from discrimination.

Paul Richardson, the city's public information officer, said the ordinance makes it illegal to deny employment, housing or service at a business establishment to anyone because of the disease.

The ordinance will also make it illegal to deny use of city facilities to a person who has AIDS or a related condition.

Richmond City Attorney Malcolm Hunter said the ordinance is dependent on the enforcement of California law, Richardson said.

"It is modeled after similar ordinances in Concord and by the Contra Costa Board of Supervisors," he explained.

Richardson said a majority of the residents of Richmond — a city of 81,000 — are in favor of the ordinance.

"We haven't gotten any complaints from anyone in the community," he said.

"The council members have said they've received calls and letters showing overwhelming support for the plan."

Michael Imfeld, a Walnut Creek attorney, said he is opposed to the ordinance. He said it conflicts with state law.

"The people didn't get a chance to look at this thoroughly," he said. "The council didn't give the ordinance issue

'We haven't gotten any complaints from anyone in the community,'

—Paul Richardson

enough publicity for people to look at it completely."

Imfeld said he plans to write a letter to the Richmond City Council opposing the ordinance approval.

"If the ordinance is supposed to adhere to state law, then most of it will be ineffective in the future," Imfeld said. "That's why I'm opposed to the plan."

Dressing down for charity

Safeway workers participating in Seals campaign

By Fern Luoma

Special to The Journal

ALBANY — If Safeway employees look a bit casual this week and next, it is because they are participating in a 10-month campaign to raise money for Easter seals.

An employees may donate $10 to Easter seals enabling them to dress casually for work for one week. They are wearing badges reading, "Ask me why I'm dressed this way." On the badge is a photo of unlaced high-top tennis shoes, the Easter seal emblem and Safeway's trademark.

Money is being collected through cans on the checkout counters, the sale of merchandise at a booth at the store's entrance and a two-week collection of raffle tickets entitling the winner to a shopping sweepstakes.

When store manager Randy Grimes and assistant manager Isham O'Neil learned that the 13 Safeway stores in Hawaii raised $300,000 in two months for Easter seals by having car washes and barbecues, they knew they would like to participate. They hope to donate more than $10,000 next March, he said.

Each weekend a different item — root beer floats, snow cones or hot dogs — is sold at the store entrance. All money goes toward the fund. In the winter the items will change to be compatible with the weather.

Starting this week shoppers may purchase a $1 ticket entitling them to a chance to win the shopping sweepstakes.

Donations for tickets are at checkstands and at the special sales booth outside. There is no limit to the number of tickets one may purchase.

The winner's name will be drawn at 8 p.m. July 15. If the winner is not present, he or she will be notified by phone or mail and make arrangements with the

Albany city officials say the increase in off-track betting is taking away expected revenue from Golden Gate Fields

Revenue

to less than $675,000. The city does not expect much more this year.
"It's a significant piece of unrestricted money that clearly does not seem to be keeping up with inflation," Salomon said. "In fact, it seems to be declining which places an increased burden on other revenues."
Similarly, sales tax revenues dropped $30,000 last year, and while the city hopes to return to normal levels in coming years, Salomon said sales tax revenues are not expected to keep up with inflation either.
Salomon said the current financial climate has forced the city to become "more efficient" as well as "more reliant" on revenues that are increasing such as business license fees and property taxes.

Fortunately, the real estate market took off about the same time race track revenues began declining, according to city officials. Property tax revenues also benefit when existing homes are added onto.
"Permit applications (for home additions) in the last three years have been five to six times as heavy as the previous five years," explained Planning Director Claudia Cappio. "We used to get 10 to 15 applications per year and now we average 40 to 50."

Cappio said most applicants want to add two or three bedrooms and a couple of bathrooms to their existing two-bedroom, one-bath home. "They are doubling the size of their homes," she explained.
Prompted by the flurry of remodeling activity, the city is now considering a stronger design review ordinance to better control oversized and unsightly additions.
"The goal is to make design review more formal and specific," Cappio said. "A more evenhanded approach should mean less hassle for applicants."
When homeowners add on to their existing homes it increases the property's tax base. Councilmember Robert Nichols said he feels the city benefits in other ways as well.

"People have a concept of how much space they need to be comfortable," he explained. "If they can't have that space in Albany, they will go elsewhere." Adequate space is especially important to young families, which in turn affects the schools and property values, Nichols said.
However, Nichols is not optimistic that property taxes will continue to make up for declines in sales tax and race track revenues. "There's going to come a point when people can't afford these property tax turnovers," he said.

Acme rate hike declared reasonable

By City News

MARTINEZ — An independent auditing firm has concluded that an 87 percent rate hike at the Acme landfill in Martinez was reasonable in light of the company's need to collect funds to close the dump under current environmental regulations.
Gary Brayton, a partner in the San Francisco accounting firm Touche Ross, told the Contra Costa County Board of Supervisors last week that the bulk of the increase from $25 to $47 per ton in tipping fees charged to trash haulers was dedicated to costs related to the impending closure of the dump.

Brayton said Acme's operating costs are reasonable, the salaries paid to its executives and officers are modest, dividends paid out were also modest and the company's profit levels are at or below industry standards.
Acme had been accused of taking advantage of the scarcity of landfill space in the county when it instituted the rate hike in February.
The Board of Supervisors considered using its emergency powers to impose rate regulation on the landfill and commissioned Touche Ross to review Acme's books.

Touche Ross had reported in an earlier study that Acme could not be faulted for failing to collect the dump closure costs over a longer period of time.
Changing environmental regulations had escalated estimates of the closure costs from about $11 million in 1987 to $41.5 million in 1988, the auditors concluded.

Brayton said the company set its higher rates based on the assumption that the closure costs would have to be collected over a three-year period, through fees paid during the remaining life of the landfill and during the operation of a temporary garbage transfer station on the same site.

Budget

ding based on staff recommendations.
One amendment to the tentative budget recommended transferring $10,000 from district business and accounting computers to the instructional computer program.
The majority of the board supported that idea except Kay Rabin. "This ($10,000) is just a thimble-full of the amount of money it would take to keep a program like this going," she said. "It puts us in a large responsibility to keep putting money in once we start."

Rabin emphasized she is not necessarily against the instructional computer program. She said, however, wants the district staff to make recommendations on the status and practicality of all program options.
A public hearing on the final budget will take place Sept. 5 at Cornell Elementary School. The superintendent is required to file the document with the county by Sept. 8.

been arrested, handcuffed and turned over to Richmond police for booking a juvenile hall on weapons charges. Instead Welch was released to the custody of a family member, Greenwood said.

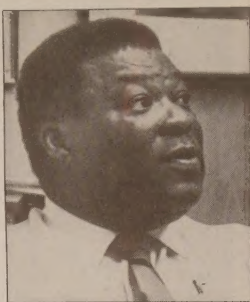

The youth's father, Robert Welch, is a chaplain for the San Pablo Police Department. One of his responsibilities is to counsel the families of shooting victims, according to a San Pablo police spokeswoman.

Nunn said John and the other students on the bus were traumatized by the incident, but their parents were not informed and the children spent the rest of the day at their usual classes.

Although Nunn was informed that night by De Anza principal James Storer, some of the parents did not hear from him until eight to 10 days after the incident, Nunn said.

"The parents just feel that there has been a severe cover-up," she said.

She said school officials will not give her a copy of the school police report on the incident although they have released it to the Welches and to several news reporters, she said.

School official Sylvester Greenwood said police were not called because the boy's attacker is mentally handicapped

Greenwood said because Welch is mentally handicapped, he has the same status as a juvenile offender and the report is not a matter of public record. Nunn has asked a county juvenile court judge to order Greenwood to turn over the report.

Greenwood said the handgun was returned to Welch's father to whom it was legally registered. According to Greenwood, the father said he did not know how the boy found the gun and promised to do something to store it more safely.

Greenwood said the school district is not pursuing the matter. He said parents of the students on the bus could ask police to determine whether Welch's parents should be charged with child endangerment or negligence.

Nunn said she tried to call Welch's parents the day before the gun incident because their son had allegedly beaten John with a belt that day.

According to Nunn, Mark Welch answered the phone and told her his parents were both out of town and that he and his brother, a junior at Pinole Valley High School were the only ones in the house.

Nunn said De Anza officials released Welch to the custody of his younger brother after the gun incident but Greenwood said a family member over 18 came to get the boy.

Nunn said Robert Welch delivered the eulogy for a 17-year-old Pinole Valley High School student killed in a drive-by shooting in Briones Regional Park in February.

vouchers to house any overflow of homeless people including able-bodied single men. Due to disputes over the shelter sites, only the Richmond mobile shelter has opened.

Berthenthal argued before Contra Costa County Superior Court Judge Richard Patsey May 24 that the county had set a standard of care for the indigent by approving the shelter plan and under state law it could not retreat from that standard without demonstrating that the needs of the homeless could be met in some other way.

Assistant County Counsel Arthur Walenta argued that the shelter plan was a discretionary program that the county was not obligated to continue.

Under Patsey's temporary order, the county is spending $2,000 to $3,000 per night on motel housing for the homeless, according to Janet Tompkins, the county coordinator of programs for the homeless.

Patsey will hear arguments July 14 on Berthenthal's request for a preliminary injunction that would maintain the county shelter program as is while the lawsuit is pending.

The resolution passed by the board June 27 states that county standards of aid and care for the needy under the obligations imposed by the state are expressed only in the resolution and in the regulations for the administration of the county general assistance program.

The resolution repeals a provision of those regulations providing for emergency assistance to people threatened with eviction, natural disasters or other one-time events that could render them homeless.

These one-time benefits were not restricted to those eligible for general assistance, according to a report by the county department of social services.

The emergency assistance funds were used to pay for the motel vouchers and for security deposits for people who needed them to move into permanent housing.

The emergency assistance language is replaced with provisions for immediate need and shelter for people who can demonstrate they will likely qualify for general assistance but need help while their applications are pending.

Those people will be referred to county-sponsored shelters or private shelters. If no shelter housing is available the applicants will be given a $170 housing allocation if they can find a unit with a monthly rent of $170 or less. For a shared unit, the allocation is $136.

In a statement to the board, Berthenthal said the program was a meaningless emergency shelter plan.

"About 70 percent of general assistance recipients never find permanent shelter at that rent," he said.

Berthenthal said under the board's new plan many of the homeless will not obtain emergency shelter.

"They will remain homeless and at risk of illness, crime and even death," Walenta told the board. The emergency assistance program was never intended to meet the needs of the homeless and was not an efficient use of the funds.

The new immediate need program will focus the county's efforts on helping the indigent return to self-sufficiency, said Walenta.

The plan adds new requirements to the standards for general assistance eligibility. Aid recipients must establish that they cannot find shelter through their own efforts and sign a repayment agreement and lien on their property.

If they are receiving shelter benefits, they must abstain from drugs and alcohol, accept the housing facilities assigned to them, obey the rules of the shelter and participate in work programs or other directed activities.

Walenta said the county intends to develop sufficient new drug and alcohol treatment facilities to help the recipients stay sober. He said the county will also intensify its job development programs for general assistance recipients.

Supervisor Tom Powers voted for the resolution but expressed doubt that county staff could meet these goals by September. "If you deliver, it'll be a miracle," he said. "If you don't I'm going to be very angry."

Bucknum said he and the other 15 members of a county task force formed to advise the board of homelessness voted unanimously two weeks ago to ask the board to delay action on the plan until the committee could review it.

From Berkeley to Orinda the play's the thing

Artistic Director Michael Addison. "We've outgrown Hinkel in many ways"

Berkeley Shakespeare Festival moves over the hill and into the '90s

Rachel LePell
Special to The Journal

The Berkeley Shakespeare Festival will answer its final curtain call in John Hinkel Park this summer. In the '90s, the group will be known as The California Shakespeare Festival and will perform in a new space just outside Orinda.

Although Berkeley is the spiritual home of the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival, Artistic Director Michael Addison looks toward the company's move to the sunnier side of the hill. He says, "We need a place with breathing room."

So it's goodbye to cozy Hinkel Park, nestled in a 4-acre shroud of oak trees, and hello to an unincorporated area with amenities like parking and freeway access.

It's a move, so it's a risk. But it's a move "we have to make," Addison says. "We've outgrown Hinkel in many ways."

Dressed in casual but corporate attire — cotton plaid shirt and slacks adorned with comfortable but stylish penny loafers — Michael Addison is a powerful force behind the organization. Articulate, dynamic and headstrong, Addison is in his third season as artistic director.

His background includes an almost lifelong relationship to the theater, having directed in major companies from Seattle to San Diego, as well as in Europe. After almost 30 years of dealing with Shakespeare, he still admits it's

"rough stuff."

Asked about the unique vision of the festival, Addison reminds us that it was founded by a small group of actors who wanted to create their own productions. Today, he says the company is still running on that same fuel.

"It's a good energy, an exciting tension," he says. One that results from a commitment both to the original texts and to the festival's integrity as artists.

Why does Shakespeare continue to play to full houses, season after season, in small town community playhouses as well as nationally recognized theaters? Is it a culturally correct thing to do, or are people truly drawn to the work?

Addison believes that the audience comes because they are "in the presence of language that is perhaps more expressive than any language they've ever experienced before" — language that is "expressive in intellectual and emotional content that reveal human beings in action at an intensity they're not used to." Tough stuff, in other words, but good stuff.

"What's important to me," Addison says, "is that Shakespeare is a bundle of contradictions that don't cancel each other out. We are forced to grapple with issues that defy conventional wisdom."

But Addison still finds himself banging his head against the wall at times. "It ain't easy. It ain't Neil Simon."

London theater tour

A 15-day theater and arts tour to London has been announced by Jay Manley, longtime Kensington resident and chairman of the Foothill College Drama Department.

Highlights of the tour include best seats for seven performances of top plays and musicals selected from London's West End, the National Theatre and the Royal Shakespeare Company.

Accommodations for 14 nights are at the Waldorf

Hotel, an Edwardian hotel now fully modernized and located in Covent Garden in the heart of the theater district. A lavish "English Breakfast" is included daily.

Cost for the tour is $3,399, which includes round-trip airfare, hotel, theater tickets, local transportation, all theater and art activities, day trips and some meals.

A $750 deposit is due July 10. For a description brochure and additional information, call Dr. Manley at 960-4417.

Asked whether the festival will branch out to produce other plays besides Shakespeare (maybe even Neil Simon), Addison replies, "We will not be just another eclectic theater where Shakespeare pays the bills. We may do work that struggles with similar issues and ideas, but we will always maintain a spirit of unpredictability."

One very popular festival's tradition will remain — the picnic-park setting. Many Berkeley residents are familiar with the terraced hillside of Hinkel, where playgoers can picnic before and during the shows. Climbing through the crowd to your seat, you can see meals and snacks ranging from sushi and chardonnay to peanut butter sandwiches and Bud Lite.

Addison gets excited about this dimension of the festival.

"In this way, we are truly a popular theater," he says. "We will not lose our desire to attract a wide range of people from all over the Bay Area." The California Shakespeare Festival will provide not only a new stage, but a new meadow on which to spread those evening meals.

Many people believe the adage that American actors are less skilled with Shakespeare than the Brits. Addison, however, does not.

"They (the actors) have their chops up," he says, because of the intensive technical training now offered at many conservatory training programs throughout the country.

However, Addison sees a definite similarity in the cultural climate of our country and that of Renaissance England: focus on the individual celebration of the new, and entrepreneurial spirit.

America, Addison feels, is "ripe" for the contradictions embodied in Shakespeare's plays. We, like our 17th-century counterparts, strive to find the elusive balance between the individual alone and the individual as part of a whole.

"We are tuned to the same issues," Addison says.

He is proud to announce a collaboration with Contra Costa College on a multi-ethnic acting training program. Some students have joined the regular ensemble. Addison, like other local artistic directors, has embraced the concept of cross-cultural casting as a reflection of the diversity of people in the Bay Area.

The Berkeley Shakespeare Festival has scheduled a season that mirrors its own efforts to find a balance in a world of contradictions. The Taming of the Shrew, directed by Peggy Shannon, opened June 30. Her interpretation is modern, setting the show in a contemporary nightclub and focusing on issues such as wife abuse and male chauvinism.

After this daring interpretation, the festival returns to a traditional rendition for Romeo and Juliet, directed by Julian Lopez-Morillas. This show will be highly suggestive of the Renaissance period. If you like a kind of "purity" in Shakespeare, you may find it here.

The advertising age at full boil

But the film loses steam halfway

Film

By Renata Polt

Special to The Journal

"Whatever it is, sell it — and if you want to stay in advertising, remember that."

Such is the motto of the London advertising firm for which Dennis Bagley (Richard E. Grant) works as a star copywriter. It is, in fact, the way to get ahead in advertising — but when the sleazy morals of the ad game literally take on a life of their own, Dennis's sleepy conscience awakens and takes up the battle. And loses.

The film is Bruce Robinson's How to Get Ahead in Advertising. As it opens, Dennis is having an unaccountably hard time coming up with an angle for a new pimple cream.

In his office, he acts out one after another potential commercials. There's the tough "Boil-Busters" angle; the "natural" angle; the "I'm the scientist who invented it, and I use it" angle. None catches fire.

Under the stress of a deadline, Dennis becomes frantic. At lunch, his loud descriptions of boils and zits draw the attention of fellow diners, and during a dinner party at his posh home, he insults the best friend of his wife Julia (Rachel Ward).

When Dennis himself develops a fast-growing boil on his neck, he goes bonkers, a reaction that seems motivated by frustration rather than principle.

Unfortunately, the film goes bonkers at about the same time Dennis does. And like him, it never really recovers.

When Dennis, dressed only in an apron, trashes the house in an attempt to get rid of all products tainted by advertising, it's still sort of funny, though I've never gotten the same humorous charge from scenes of destruction that I think I'm supposed to. But when the pink and blue animated birds emerge from the TV sets, the film really loses.

And that's all before we see that Dennis's boil has grown into a tiny head that winks at him and says, "Hi ya, handsome." And that's before the boil begins offering advertising slogans of its own.

Even at this point, Bruce Robinson, who wrote as well as directed How to Get Ahead, squeezes some humorous mileage out of the situation.

Seeing a psychiatrist whom Julia's doctor has recommended, Dennis insists that, if it's going to speak up, the boil will have to pay its own way. (The shrink's diagnosis, by the way, is that the boil is the personification of Dennis's guilt — not a bad notion.)

Dennis and his alter ego become bitter antagonists, with Dennis turning into a rabid environmentalist, and the boil accusing him of being a commie.

Finally — you wonder why the delay — Dennis is hospitalized so the boil can be lanced. The results, however, aren't quite as anticipated.

It's hard to disagree with the message of How to Get Ahead in Advertising; it's the medium that's so distressing.

Starting out as satire, the film

Albany makes strong showing at track meet

Kalagian-Federico took first place in championship

By Stu Zisman
Special to The Journal

Ten Albany youths, led by Gianna Kalagian-Federico's first-place finish in the 11- to 12-year-old girls' competition, won awards in the National Age Group Team Championships held June 28 at Edwards Stadium in Berkeley.

Federico had a sparkling comeback behind victory in the pentathlon, a five-event competition scored like the decathlon (10 events).

The pentathlon events for girls include the 50-meter hurdles, shot put, high jump, long jump and

Tatum Tapscott had a strong second-place finish

800-meter run. Going into the fifth and final event of the day, the 800, Federico trailed the leader by 17 points. But a strong finish in this race allowed her to claim victory for herself and the Berkeley East Bay Track Club.

Rachel Mulcahy, a teammate in the same event, also finished well and moved into a tie for the sixth and final place.

In younger girls' competition, Berkeley Eastbay Track Club fielded three trophy winners, all from Albany.

Mitra Javandel gave a steady all-around performance in the triathlon (high jump, shot and 200-meter run) to earn a second.

Teammates Lindsay Watty and Mizuho Mimoto took third and fourth respectively.

The boys' triathlon competition also produced three winners. Anthony Taylor, who a few days earlier won the Regional Jesse Owens competition in the long jump, successfully switched to the high jump, shot and 400-meter run.

He was particularly strong in the 400, which he won, and he piled up enough points for a third against some outstanding competitors from Southern California.

BEBTC teammates Ricky Cyrus took fifth and Cahl-Roach Smith sixth in the same competition.

In the boys' pentathlon, Tatum Tapscott scored well in the hurdles, high jump and 1,500 for a strong second-place finish. Teammate Andre Patterson won the shot and finished third overall.

Approximately 40 youth track clubs from around the country entered in the multi-event and individual competition which continued through July 2 on the U.C. Berkeley campus.

Winning Little Leaguer now pentathlon champ

It was a busy sports week for 12-year-old Benj Myers as he successfully switched from baseball cleats to track spikes and claimed the Regional Jr. Olympic Pentathlon championship in Fresno.

Earlier in the week, the Albany Little League Champion Cubs for whom Myers plays shortstop, ventured to Lafayette for a playoff game.

Myers, a student at Albany Middle School, was scheduled to compete, the next morning in National Age Group team championships in Berkeley.

He fell victim to an illness he was battling during the baseball game, but recovered in time for a trip to Fresno where he represented Berkeley East Bay Track Club in the 11- to 12-year-old division pentathlon.

The five-event competition uses Olympic decathlon scoring tables in which athletes earn points for their performance in each event.

Myers used personal records

in the long jump and 1,500-meter run, along with a good showing in the shot put, to amass enough points to win the overall competition and advance to the Junior Olympic National Championships in Spokane, Wash. July 27.

Owens regional a sign of things to come

By Stu Zisman
Special to The Journal

Albany youth won eight medals including four gold at the Regional Jesse Owens meet held at Sacramento State College June 17. This meet, one of eight held around the country, serves as a final stepping stone to the National Jesse Owens meet to be held in Los Angeles in August.

Albany youth qualifying for this meet include Julian Lang, 14-year-old recent graduate of Albany Middle School who sped to victory in the 100 meters for his age group and Gianna Kalagian-Federico, another Albany Middle Schooler breezed to 11- to 12-year-old girls' 400 meter race championship.

Other gold medal winners from Albany included Antony Taylor in the long jump and Peter Maris in the softball throw. Both competed in the 9- to 10-year-old division which does not go on to the nationals.

Other medal winners included

Geoffrey Wheaton, high jump; Tony Leonard, high jump; Burlin Germany, softball throw; and Richie Souza, 1,500 meters. Each won bronze medals at this meet.

By far this was the best showing to date at this meet for Albany which began sending entrants three years ago. For each of the past two years an Albany Middle Schooler has qualified for the national meet. Tammy Homes claimed the national championship last year in softball throw.

This is the first time two Albany youths have qualified for this prestigious meet. It is also the most gold medals and total medals won by Albany at this level of competition.

The Albany contingent consisted of 15 qualifiers for the meet, which is also a record number for the city.

Other meet qualifiers were Erik Hanson and Naomi Parker in the high jump, Mitra Javandel in the long jump, Nate Bailey 200 meters, Naiova Westbrook and Yiga Josayma in the softball throw. Michelle Arellano qualified in the long jump but was unable to attend because of illness.

Merely qualifying for the meet represented a high level of accomplishment. The requirements included finishing in the top three places at a city meet and then winning the district meet which, in Albany's case, included to finishers from Hayward to Martinez.

The regional meet in Sacramento to represented a tournament district meet champions coming from Fresno to the Oregon border and from San Francisco through northern Nevada.

Victory at this level is particularly sweet for 11- to 14-year-olds. Arco, sponsor of the Owens meet, flies winners to Los Angeles.

Working Together

By Helen Tinsley

Dad's smoking makes Mom sick

I have a problem; my mother's very sick. She has bronchitis and asthma and if she doesn't get rest she might have to get hospitalized. It's very hard to let her rest because we have eight kids in our house and everybody's always fighting, arguing or having problems with something.

I want my father to stop smoking because that's how my mother got sick. I think that if he doesn't stop smoking he might get sick too. Every time I try to do something about it my mother says that my father's a grown man and that I am pushing it a little too far. What should I do?

I think you've done everything you can. Sometimes kids feel they can control what their parents do. A kid might feel that if she says, does or thinks the right thing, she can make her parent change. But it doesn't work that way.

When a parent (or child) smokes regularly, he or she is addicted to cigarettes. That means that his or her body and mind are so attached to smoking that it takes a huge effort to stop.

Usually people addicted to smoking (or drinking or other drugs) have to go to doctors or to special programs to help them stop. Just telling your father to quit smoking isn't enough to make him quit.

It's good that you told your father and mother how you feel, but don't be surprised or feel guilty if your father doesn't change. The only way he'll stop smoking is if he really believes he needs to and if he gets some help with it. Read the next letter and answer to understand more about addictions.

Every Thursday night my husband plays poker with his friends. I do not object to his having a night out with the boys but I am disgusted and discouraged because of all the money he keeps losing. Once in a while he wins, but then he blows all his winnings on things I consider trivial.

We have been married for four years and are saving to buy a house or at least I have been saving but we are no closer to having the money for the down payment than we were four years ago.

Your husband, like the father in the previous letter, may be addicted — in this case to gambling. There are many kinds of addictions. Generally we think of alcohol, cigarettes and street drugs but other common ones are caffeine, prescription drugs, food, work and sex.

Any time a person loses control over the use of a substance or of an activity, an addiction probably exists. As you are experiencing with your husband's excessive spending, an addicted person will jeopardize his home, his savings, his health and his relationships just to maintain the addiction.

It has been said that when one is addicted, one is married to that addiction. You are probably feeling like that, feeling as if you are second in your husband's life.

It is important for you to recognize, just as it is for the girl in the previous letter, that people who are addicted maintain their addiction by denying it. By denial I don't mean a person just saying, "I'm not addicted." I'm describing a firmly entrenched way of behaving that can get to the point that the addicted person may actually believe he or she is not addicted. These denial maneuvers may include the following:

1. Minimizing — admitting there's a problem but adding, "It's not that bad," or "I can stop whenever I want."

2. Diverting — continually changing the subject when someone brings up the addiction.

3. Blaming — putting the responsibility for the addiction on someone else. For example, "I wouldn't have to drink (or go out gambling) if you didn't nag all the time."

4. Hostility — becoming angry when the topic is raised. People will back off because they don't want to deal with the addicted person's anger.

You might recognize some of these denial patterns in your husband. Although you cannot make him change, you can learn more about the problem and about coping and changing mechanisms for yourself by contacting Gamblers Anonymous, a self-help network largely made up of gamblers, ex-gamblers and their families.

They offer supportive programs for those addicted to gambling, as well as programs for their families (called Gam-Anon). They even sponsor a group for teens. Call them at (800) 541-7867. Attend a meeting even if your husband won't. I highly recommend it.

RESTAURANT GUIDE

East Bay Dining

By Michael S. Holmes

the beauty, grace and elegance of North Africa and the Middle East be found at the newly opened Ali's in Kensington. The incredible interior design is only an introduction to this culinary cultural experience that can be described as Moroccan Romantic.

Just a month ago, the menu boasts the finest in cuisines from Tunisia, Algiers, Morocco and the Middle East. Meals begin with a beautiful assortment of Mezza which can include: harira, a traditional Tunisian soup, pil pil, sauteed prawns with fresh herbs and tomatoes; and shakshoua, ground lean lamb, seasoned with spices and served raw like tartare, with pita bread.

Entrees include from the grill: shish taouk, grilled fillet of chicken in lemon juice, basil and olive oil; and rack of lamb. Other specialties are braised and include: chicken oas, braised chicken in a rich sauce with Medjool dates; Tagine Saudi, braised lamb with potato and okra; and Tagine Jerusalem, chunks of lamb braised with Jerusalem artichokes.

In addition to these dishes there are many couscous, curry and vegetarian dishes that will delight your palate and make your evening at Ali's unforgettable.

This exciting new restaurant is located at 385 Colusa Avenue, in Kensington and open 7 days a week. The bar opens at 4 p.m. and dinner is served at 5 p.m., for additional information and reservations call 526-1500.

Albany youth embark on diplomatic journey

By Fern Luoma
Special to The Journal

ALBANY — Nine Albany High School students and one teacher will leave Saturday for a three-week visit to the Soviet Union under the People to People Initiative for Understanding Program.

This is an America-Soviet youth exchange program founded by President Eisenhower while he was in office.

The group will return July 31. Unlike other exchange programs where students stay in family hosted homes, these students will stay in hotels.

Members of the Soviet exchange groups will greet the Americans on arrival in each city. Students will have supper with a Soviet host family occasionally but will eat most of the time in hotels and restaurants.

Albany High teacher Susan Charlis will chaperone the students. There will be 32 students from the Bay Area who will unite with the Albany representatives to form one group.

From Albany, are 12th graders Jacob Lewis and Scott Turtle; 11th graders Terri Madero, Rosemary Torrano and Kevin Wehr; 10th graders Baily Levis, Nora McFarland and Renee Romero; and ninth grader Maria Friis.

The students raised some or all of their own money for the trip. One is painting a house, others are babysitting or doing odd jobs and some have part-time jobs.

They plan to arrive in Leningrad, Kiev, Odessa, Moscow and Vladimir. They will see a ballet and visit Pioneer Camp which is equivalent to a Girl Scout and Boy Scout camp.

There will be times when they will sing American folk songs to their hosts. They will take souvenirs such as picture post cards of California, sweat shirts and T-shirts from U.C. Berkeley and Stanford, California key chains, Bazooka bubble gum and "I Love Albany" lapel buttons donated by the Chamber of Commerce. Albany Little League gave each student an Albany T-shirt to wear.

For the past six weeks the students have been tutored in Russian language and customs, learning essential needs for everyday travel.

Wehr studied Russian customs and the revolution and tsarist history this past year preparing for this trip.

Romero realizes the American and Soviet people have different views and she would like to have the Soviets understand what the Americans are really like.

"I feel there is an imaginary wall between the Soviet Union and the United States. I hope this trip will help dissolve the wall. I have always wanted to visit Russia because it is different, both the people and the government," Friis said.

Kensington offers Colusa Circle fair next Saturday

KENSINGTON — A Colusa Circle fair will be held July 15 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The festival is to acquaint the community with the array of businesses in the Colusa Circle area of Kensington.

Included are a free aerobics class from Hearts in Motion at 2 p.m.; flamenco dancing; a guitar construction demonstration by John Mello; a pottery exhibit by the Hiersoux Gallery; painting and sculpture demonstrations by member artists of the Hammons Gallery; and tours and exhibits by the Golden Apple School.

Food and drink from the Circle's restaurants include barbecued shish kabob from Cafe Select; ales and food from The Kensington Pub; Moroccan cuisine from Ali's Restaurant; and breads from the smallest bakery in the world, Semmifreddi.

Restaurateur and TV celebrity Narsai David will sign copies of his book at 2 p.m. Clowns, balloons and other surprises are in store for the kids.

'Little Shop of Horrors' opens in E.C. tomorrow

EL CERRITO — Little Shop of Horrors' leading man is not a man but a plant, in the outrageous musical about a man-eating plant that grows and thrives on blood. The plant is dependent on its caretaker, Seymour, for its nutrition.

Little Shop of Horrors, a production of the Contra Costa Civic Theatre in El Cerrito, is a musical with appeal to all ages. It offers a great score, direction by Susan Moretti, and fantastic set design by Matt Flynn. The show is directed by Kathleen Ray with costumes by Holly Below.

The musical stars Todd Aragon of Alameda as Seymour; Keers as Audrey; and Paulson as Orin Scrivello, the doctor.

made no attempts to file for a new one, according to El Cerrito Planning Director Dwayne Guyer.

His office has already sent Phoenix's board of directors a letter warning them they are operating against the law. Guyer would not specify what future action the city would take against the school.

The Phoenix School contends it is operating legally on the basis of a city permit granted to El Cerrito United Methodist in 1956. The city says the church's variance does not apply to the Phoenix School.

Bill Lowe, board president and attorney for the school, could not be reached for comment. According to Phoenix administrator Kathe Latham, Lowe is currently investigating the legality of the 1956 ordinance.

The city and state both became aware of the Phoenix School through a number of anonymous phone tips.

slips into horror, and finally into diatribe, with the diatribe taking over like, well, like an extra head.

Richard E. Grant (he played in Withnail and I, also directed by Bruce Robinson) gets all the speeches, and they are speeches. Rachel Ward as Julia (The Thorn Birds, Against All Odds) looks decorative, but that's all she gets to do.

As for writer-director Robinson, it's difficult to imagine that he wrote the powerful The Killing Fields, for which he received the Oscar nomination.

And as for that message — that greed is ruining the planet — it's not so different from that of Mike Leigh's much more amusing High Hopes.

It's gratifying to know that there are still some Angry Young Men living and writing in England. I just wish this one would take a refresher course at film school.

Audi hits the mark with Coupe Quattro

Company bouncing back

It is said that "automobiles are an affair of the heart" and, if that's true, then Audi's new Coupe Quattro has just given us a new quiver of arrows. Its sleek looks, quality build and adhesive handling are all part of Audi's renewed image for the 1990s.

Audi is on the rebound, especially since the "hoo-ha" about unintended acceleration, which has been proved by several government agencies in Canada and the U.S. to be a simple case of operator error or, as the U.S. government chose to term it, "special mis-application."

Audi feels it is finally out from under the gun and hopes to reestablish itself as a prominent player in the luxury sedan and sports coupe markets.

Audi is part of the German Volkswagen group and, as such, sells its products around the world.

In fact, 400,000 units were sold last year but only 20,000 of these were sold in the U.S.

Audi is out to regain its U.S. sales position by rebuilding its image with dynamic new vehicles that continue a strong tradition of quality, safety and performance.

This month heralds the pre-introduction of two new 1990 models, the Coupe Quattro and a new V8-powered flagship.

Looking very much like the 90 series compact sedans, the Coupe

Auto Scene

David Fetherston

Quattro uses only the 90 series hood and grille. The rest of the vehicle is all new.

Drawing on its previous experience with the 4000 coupe, Audi has gone to the limit to build a vehicle that is the ultimate in safety and performance and has only built it as an all-wheel drive model.

This mixing of technologies and practicality has produced a coupe with a split personality, incorporating both a sporty heart and the needs of a four-member family quite adequately.

All-wheel drive master

Safety is the prime feature of the coupe's basic nature. It comes that way with the latest line-up of technologies that are designed to give the driver a wider, safer performance envelope.

These items include the best

The 1990 Audi Coupe Quattro is the latest design.

"all-wheel drive system in the world" and a superb three-channel anti-skid or ABS braking system.

Audi has become the master of all-wheel drive. Its Quattros have won the famous Pikes Peak Hill Climb and the Trans Am racing series in the past few years.

The coupe's all-wheel drive system uses a special Torsen center differential which can sense wheel traction requirements mechanically.

This means that within its capability, the all-wheel drive system can deliver the perfect power to the most appropriate wheel for the greatest amount of traction.

The combination of technologies using the all-wheel drive and the ABS brakes makes the Coupe Quattro one of the world's safest automobiles.

Powering the new coupe is Audi's first five-cylinder multi-valve engine. It uses dual overhead cams with four valves per cylinder.

It is set to run at 10.3 to 1 compression and develops 164 horsepower. This rates the coupe at a brisk 135 mph top speed and gives it a zippy 0 to 60 mph time of 8.1 seconds.

The engine is managed with a variety of the latest electronic "whiz-bangs" which can give the optimum spark and fuel combination to each cylinder on every stroke.

Power is delivered through a five-speed transmission with a fully synchronized reverse gear.

I spent two days driving the new Quattro around the Cascade Mountains in Washington and then on to Seattle International Raceway. I was mighty impressed with what I drove, saw and learned.

The coupe is a neat vehicle aimed directly at the enthusiast driver, delivering a well rounded package of safety, handling, performance, equipment and comfort.

The interior packaging is set up for four adults and the driver's position offers controls set at finger reach.

The dash is a clean and simple display with large backlit analog gauges for speed, tachometer, coolant temperature and fuel. The dash also contains a small trip computer and digital clock.

The remainder of the controls are all placed across the center dash. These are all low use controls, including the heated seat switches and fog lamps.

The center control functions also include standard air conditioning-heater controls and the stereo AM-FM tape player.

The leather covered seats are power up front and multi-split in the rear and offer a fairly good level of support with excellent lateral location.

The rear seat also has a trick fold down armrest with a fold out ski bag so that skis can be securely locked inside the trunk and will not mess up the interior.

The rear seat offers a reasonable combination of headroom and legroom and anyone under 5 feet 10 inches should be able to find a comfortable position. This translates into a usable space for a family of four.

The interior can accommodate five for occasional travel if necessary.

Audi intends to sell only several thousand of this new model in its first year. Pricing is aimed to be around the $28,000 mark for release which is about $5000 cheaper than the original 4000 Quattro first cost.

At this price it certainly offers plenty, especially in light of the Quattro being fully loaded except for three small options.

Audi is also offering some extraordinary new leasing deals under the name of "the Audi Advantage" which offer all lease, service, parts and labor under a very attractive no-residual three year leasing program.

I liked the Coupe Quattro very much. Its price reflects its complete packaging of options and as one of the world's safest automobiles, its adhesive performance, comfortable ride and slick looks are certainly hard to walk past.

Renaissance woman turns losses into opportunities

WHEN SHE returned from a visit to France, Arthea Senger had her garden redone in the manner of Monet's Giverny. It is lovely, calm and inviting. It is something people often think of doing when they visit Giverny but few follow through on it. That is what is so interesting about Arthea Senger. She does the things she thinks about doing and she has a great time doing them.

Arthea was born in Oakland and grew up around Lake Merritt. She attended Oakland High and Mills College, earning her bachelor of arts degree in social work. On graduation she went to work as a social worker in Alameda County a Contra Costa counties. She married Gene Knapp, a clinical psychologist. When their first child, Chris, was born, she stopped work and stayed home. Staying home included, of course, community, social and political activities.

After seven years she decided to return to work part time. She had been in recreation during the summers while in college and it had gotten what was then a rare certificate in creative dramatics for children.

So she became a drama specialist for the city of Richmond. She really enjoyed it, working with children of all ages and stayed at it for seven years. At the end of that time she decided she wanted to stay in recreation but wanted more from it so she went back to school. At age 40 she received her master's in recreation from San Francisco State University.

WITH HER degree in hand Arthea became supervisor of the Point Richmond teen center. She worked there for four years during the height of the drug culture period. The center had two or three therapy groups, art classes and tutoring. An average of 135 kids a day, from all over attended.

Arthea's chief worker was Greg Cook who was appointed to the Recreation Commission in El Cerrito. He was later elected to the City Council and served one or two terms as mayor of that city.

It was Greg who asked her to move from Richmond recreation to El Cerrito. She did and she worked there for four years until El Cerrito fell on hard times and had to do away with 14 full time positions. Arthea's was one of the 14.

BUT SHE USED this as an opportunity to make another change. (See what I mean? Not a loss, but an opportunity.) She had been reading a book on Bay Area women therapists and was enthralled with a chapter on Marian Saltman who did play therapy with adults.

She found Saltman in Sausalito living on a houseboat. Arthea, who had been widowed by that time, apprenticed herself with Saltman and had a wonderful year.

People would come in and act out their fancies using all kinds of costume and musical instruments she kept on hand. It was an opportunity for people to once again experience their youth. A great way to break through, move back and experience the joy of childhood again, she said.

Artie co-taught a class at San Francisco State with Saltman called the Developmental Processes of Play. She then opened her own playhouse in her spacious redwood home.

She had a large art room and a huge sand box. People would put scenes together, then tell the story behind them. "Always very insightful," she said.

She also used fairy tales. Remembering their favorite fairy tales from childhood, clients would research them and act out a scene as their favorite person in the tale and then as their most hated person. "It was particularly wonderful for women who could let it all out as the mean father or the wicked stepmother."

The there was est. She investigated it, tried it and became involved in it, acting as a guest seminar leader and joining the staff. She worked with est for 10 years, gaining self-confidence and taking control of her own world. She was no longer the victim," she said.

She told of an aunt from whom she had been estranged since she was 21. Est always talked about plotting relationships so she went to her mother lode country where her aunt lived and finally found, although the aunt had remarried and she didn't even know her new name. Her aunt wanted to home so she left a message, her door and later telephoned her and wrote her a long letter.

In January Arthea received a letter from an attorney saying her aunt had died and Arthea her only relative. The attorney said had it not been for her letter he would have known nothing about her. Her legs was a gold mine.

Arthea's happiness lay in the fact that she and her aunt had reconciled before she died. "Such a risk to forgive and hold grudges," she said. She and they were friends before and died.

During these time Arthea married again and divorced. Children grew up. Chris married Joel Anderson and has two. She is an anesthesiologist technician in Brookside Hospital. Kirk Knapp is now working on abstract painting and sculpting.

ARTHEA HAS renewed her love of painting which had originally been her major at Mills. She has learned that the only way to become a professional artist is just to paint and she is. She shows some lovely work she has done in Acapulco. She belongs to the El Cerrito Art Association and is now on the board of Oakland Art Association.

She has had a painting done and displayed by Children's Hospital and another on display at San Francisco Federal Prison in Orinda.

Artie has been traveling a great deal. She also joined Overeaters Anonymous and 80 pounds. "Every day you back and see what you have accomplished and what you can start on the next day anew," she said.

Thank you for your call note. Please continue. I need your input. Interesting people, events, travel, etc. Write 555 Pierce St., No. 443, Albany 94706 or call 525-4585.
